The article throws light on the problem of formation of ecological consciousness fundamentals in the junior schoolchildren. The author presents the results of the study held on sample group of schoolchildren (N=64, age 8-10, of general education schools of Saratov) with “Naturopil” method allowing to point out the level characteristics in attitude towards nature and also extent of naturalistic competence. Applied aspect of the problem under study can be put to practice in the course of development and realization of ecological and educational projects.
